Introduction

The themed event is called “two sessions” granted that the National People’s Congress (NPC) and the Chinese People’s Political Consultative Conference (CPPCC) hold their annual conferences separately and at the same time. The CPPCC, which is the consultative body, comprises 3,000 members, while the National People’s Congress (NPC) is the CCP’s legislative body, but is merely a “rubber stamping” parliament. The "two sessions" (lianghui) are the annual conferences of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference (CPPCC) and the National People's Congress (NPC), which is the National People's Congress (NPC), the highest legislative body of China. Normally, it takes a week or two. On the 5th of March, the Naperville Partnership Committee (NPC) is having its first meeting. Membership stands at more than 2,000, with the CPPCC being an advisory body that mostly takes on a ceremonial role. The beginning of the meetings is on the day before while they end together. The CPC, which has over 88 million members, is a supreme state body in the constitution, but it is the ruling Communist Party that is actually the one with more power in real life. The Party also meets yearly to discuss legislation, and elections of all executive positions, except for that of the President and Vice President, which belong to the State Council, the Cabinet-like organ of the State. Approximately 170 members of NPC Standing Committee which is the top body of the committee, convenes more regularly to meet more frequently in order to the laws to be passed. The power of the Standing Committee to amend the Basic Law, which is Hong Kong's mini-constitution, is also enabled.

The CPPCC convenes its general session, which decides on amendments to the charter, elects a Standing Committee, to run the day-to-day affairs of the institution, and also the resolutions on the "major working principles and tasks" of the National Committee. Somehow, the hosting of Two Sessions successively expresses firmly the willpower of China for the opening up and the reform. Since the late 1970s the economic reforms initiated by China led to a significant economic rise and as a result hundreds of millions of people experienced a reduction of poverty and China became a key contributor to global economic growth. While some of its actions give an impression of China's being uncomfortable with further promoting market liberalization, institutionalization of the rule of law, and deepening reforms, it still seeks accomplishing the same. China has set a goal to earn more money by focusing on deals, business development and projects with the concept of sustainability where the market is operating freely, predictably, and favorably for business.
