China Significant Contribution to Counter to Global Terrorism Efforts

Published on 5th February 2024

<https://prccsf.com/paper/pdf/China-Significant-Contribution-to-Counter-to-Global-Terrorism-Efforts.pdf>

Terrorism is a common enemy of humanity, a serious threat to international peace and security, and a challenge to all countries and all humanity. All members of the international community have a shared responsibility to fight it. For decades, the United Nations led the creation of relevant conventions and other documents, coordinated the joint efforts of member states to fight against terrorism and put those efforts under the rule of law. The international community, through unremitting efforts, has gradually created a multi-level framework for anti-terrorism legal instruments, including international and regional conventions, multilateral and bilateral agreements, and domestic laws. As a victim of terrorism, China has long faced real danger and has always attached great importance to legal anti-terrorist measures. It has experience in or adherence to international conventions and treaties, as well as in the amendment and improvement of criminal law. Faced with new developments in international and domestic terrorism, China first sought to gain a deeper understanding of law-based counter-terrorism, summarize its underlying dynamics, and identify appropriate countermeasures.

China has found a way to combat terrorism based on a law that adapts to its reality, establishing a sound legal framework, promoting strict, impartial and procedural enforcement of laws, and guaranteeing impartial justice and effective protection of human rights. It safeguarded national and public security, protected human life and property, and promoted global and regional security and stability.

Kazakhstan's Significant Role in Middle Corridor

Published on 10th February 2024

<https://prccsf.com/paper/pdf/Kazakhstans-Significant-Role-in-Middle-Corridor.pdf>

The Middle Corridor is the shortest route from China's Pacific coast to Europe, running through Central Asia and Kazakhstan across the Caspian Sea into South Caucasus region further into Europe. In 2022, the traffic volume of transit cargo on this route increased two and a half times up to almost 1.5 million tons which is an absolute record for the corridor becoming its growth potential indicator. Although the Corridor offers a shorter transit time and lower emissions than the ocean, it has less capacity at higher costs compared to its alternative. On this path, Kazakhstan acts as a transit country due to its geographical position between Europe and Asia. The country has a well-developed transport infrastructure consisting of railways, roads, ports, and air transportation which allows moving goods across the territory as another solution for Silk Road implementation between East and West.

With global trade dynamics changing, the role of Kazakhstan's contributions will remain critical in ensuring that Middle Corridor attains its full potential as a major conduit for regional and international business thereby creating wealth and development across continents. Through its involvement with countries and organizations, Kazakhstan has widened economic prospects, security arrangements as well as diplomatic power.

Taiwan should not allow US Manipulation in its Internal matters

Published on 13th February 2024

<https://prccsf.com/paper/pdf/Taiwan-should-not-allow-US-manipulations.pdf>

Taiwan should not allow U.S. manipulations in its internal matters, as seen in the recently held leadership and legislature elections, where Lai Ching-te, a Democratic Progressive Party (DPP) candidate, emerged victorious in the leadership race. The conclusion of Taiwan's elections should prompt the island's newly elected leadership to establish good and pragmatic relations with mainland China, steer away from the U.S. strategy of containment, and adopt a path of peace, progress, and prosperity. The assertion that the U.S. attempts to misuse Taiwan's election system, thereby diverting attention, raises concerns about potential interference in the democratic processes of the island nation. The U.S.'s involvement in Taiwan's electoral affairs has become a focal point, with accusations suggesting an attempt to manipulate and redirect attention for personal motives. The continuous consequences of U.S. interference in Taiwan's internal affairs will lead to a conflict and an economic recession. The U.S. played a role in the adoption of a confrontational stance. However, it is asserted that the U.S. has historically employed a tactic of hyping regional tensions to instill fear in the area, serving its hegemonic interests.

In conclusion, the actions and policies of the U.S. in the internal affairs of Taiwan are the reasons for the perceived tensions, straining cross-strait relations and regional stability. Taiwan's must adopt a peaceful and pragmatic approach is crucial to ensuring its own interests and contributing to the overall harmony in the Pacific region.

China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC)

Published on January 24, 2024

The China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) was established between China and Pakistan on 22nd May 2013 i.e. 11 years ago. The CPEC is the lead initiative of Chinese President Xi Jinping's 'One Belt, One Road' project which seeks a trade route in international waters with Europe, the Middle East, and the Asian giant. This trade will help Pakistan to develop good trading businesses with other nations and better ties. On the other hand, China gains rapid access to new markets for manufacturing. This initiative visions regional connectivity which will help benefit not only Pakistan and China but also the neighboring countries i.e. Iran, Afghanistan, India, and the Central Asian Republics in the region.

The CPEC holds a more significant position among all other BRI's because it is considered as the shortest route of all the BRI routes. It has a distance of 2442km whereas others are considered to be much longer. This gives CPEC a very momentous site to carry out trade. The initiative has a very strategic significance because this can help Pakistan boost its economy, better infrastructure, and modern transportation. This will also help as many energy projects are also in the process of helping both Pakistan and China rise to glory by creating new job opportunities and providing shared skills and knowledge. The package is very beneficial for Pakistan.
