Azerbaijan has rapidly emerged as a key global player in the energy sector, not just as a hydrocarbon powerhouse but as a dynamic advocate for energy diversification and sustainability.

The country's strategic vision is reflected in the rising international prestige of initiatives such as Baku Energy Week, a national brand that has transformed into a globally recognized energy forum. This event symbolizes the country's energy initiatives and forward-thinking leadership by fostering energy diplomacy, building strategic partnerships, and positioning Azerbaijan prominently on the global energy map. Over the years, Baku Energy Week has grown to address a broad spectrum of energy issues, from conventional oil and gas to renewable technologies and green transitions, by shaping new approaches, establishing global dialogues, and advancing shared energy goals. As Azerbaijan strengthens its energy security, diversifies supply chains, and transitions toward green energy, its credibility as a reliable global partner continues to rise.

The event's scale and international reach, featuring over 80 countries, underscore the nation's central role in global energy cooperation. A particularly ambitious and visionary aspect of Azerbaijan's strategy involves the development of territories liberated from occupation into green energy zones. Such efforts reflect both an ecological responsibility and a deep commitment to sustainable progress. As Azerbaijan transforms these regions, it simultaneously promotes environmental recovery and innovation-led growth, showing the world how post-conflict reconstruction can align with clean energy leadership.

China's Commitment to Path of Financial Development with Chinese Characteristics

Published on 11 July 2025

<https://prccsf.com/paper/pdf/China-Commitment-to-Path-of-Financial-Development.pdf>

In the evolving architecture of global finance, China has chosen to forge a unique path defined by its development philosophy. The concept of “financial development with Chinese characteristics” is based on a comprehensive, systematic strategy under the leadership of President Xi Jinping, who has consistently stressed the core purpose of finance as serving the real economy and supporting the overall modernization of China. Rooted in China’s unique historical trajectory, this approach leads state-led governance, innovation-driven reform, risk control, and inclusivity to foster a robust, secure, and high quality financial system.

The term “financial development with Chinese characteristics” was first emphasized during a group study session of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party of China (CPC) Central Committee in February 2019 and has since become a critical pillar of Xi Jinping’s economic thought. Through the 2023 Central Financial Work Conference, when building a financially strong nation was elevated to a strategic national goal. The roots of this philosophy can be traced back to Xi’s 17 years in Fujian Province (1985–2002). During this period, he led pioneering efforts in financial reform, exploring innovative ways to use finance to support industrial growth, infrastructure development, and poverty alleviation. Such hands-on experience shaped his deep understanding of the dialectical relationship between finance and the economy.

BRICS as Voice for Global South

Published on 15 July 2025

<https://prccsf.com/paper/pdf/BRICS-as-Voice-for-Global-South.pdf>

Today, we are again witnessing a moment where the BRICS grouping, comprising Brazil, Russia, India, China, and South Africa, has emerged as a formidable representative of the Global South. BRICS stands both as a centrifugal force challenging the dominance of the West and a centripetal force uniting diverse nations around shared developmental goals, positioned at the intersection of geopolitical flux and economic realignment. Since its inception, BRICS has championed multilateralism, fairness, and inclusivity in global affairs. Its values starkly contrast with the exclusivity and rigidity of existing Western-led institutions, which often reflect a post-World War II order that fails to account for the economic dynamism of the Global South. BRICS provides a crucial counterbalance by advocating reforms that better reflect today's multipolar world. The 2025 BRICS summit in Brazil on 6-7 July 2025 is poised to offer alternative models of cooperation, development, and diplomacy that transcend Cold War binaries. By doing this, BRICS is gradually reshaping the global rules to cater to the needs of many, rather than the dominance of a few. Global South nations have long voiced their dissatisfaction with a system that marginalizes their contributions while constraining their developmental pathways. Today, they are no longer content with mere participation, they demand a seat at the decision-making table to be active shapers of global governance, which underscores a growing confidence and capability among emerging economies.

In an era of rising geopolitical tensions and rapidly evolving technology, global supply chains are experiencing one of the most significant transformations. Governments and enterprises alike are seeking to adapt to these changes by creating supply networks that are not only more efficient but also resilient, innovative, and sustainable. At the heart of this global restructuring lies China, a key player in the world economy and an indispensable link in global supply chains. Against this backdrop, the China International Supply Chain Expo (CISCE) emerges as a significant initiative to promote cooperation, stability, and innovation within international supply networks. Now in its third edition, the Expo, held in Beijing from July 17 to July 21, 2025, under the theme “Connecting the World for a Shared Future,” is a testament to China's commitment to strengthening global supply chain resilience and promoting open international collaboration. The global economy faces turbulent headwinds. Protectionist policies, decoupling trends, supply chain bottlenecks, and economic slowdowns are forcing industries across the board to recalibrate. In this fragile landscape, the CISCE stands out as a symbol of stability and mutual benefit.

Attracting over 650 enterprises and institutions from 75 countries, regions, and international organizations, the expo is a comprehensive platform for industrial matchmaking, policy dialogue, and technological exchange organized by the China Council for the Promotion of International Trade (CCPIT). CISCE is structured around six major supply chains, such as advanced manufacturing, clean energy, smart vehicles, digital technology, healthcare, and green agriculture, plus a dedicated supply chain service area showcases China's holistic approach to nurturing interconnected and future-ready industries.

The 2025 Belt and Road Journalists Forum, held in Jiangxi Province, China, from July 14 to July 20, offered a transformative journey into the heart of China’s ancient civilization and modern dynamism. Organized by the AllChina Journalists Association under the theme “Promoting Civilizational Dialogues and Global Modernization with the Power of Journalists,” the forum brought together media professionals from around the world for an immersive experience. As an international participant, this trip left a deep imprint on my understanding of China's balance between tradition and innovation, showcasing how heritage and modernity can coexist to guide a more inclusive, sustainable future. The week-long visit through Jiangxi Province offered a profound and transformative first impression of Chinese culture and civilization. Experiencing Jiangxi in such an immersive, firsthand manner left a deep and lasting impact on my understanding of heritage, development, and the shared values of humanity. As one of the world’s oldest continuous civilizations, China presents a legacy that is timeless and vibrant, deeply philosophical yet remarkably practical, and ever-evolving while rooted in millennia of tradition. Jiangxi Province exemplifies this philosophy of “harmony without uniformity” by offering the world a roadmap for inclusive growth where tradition informs innovation, nature partners with development, and culture inspires diplomacy. In today’s fragmented world, Jiangxi’s story is a powerful reminder that progress need not come at the cost of identity, heritage, or environment.

In the evolving architecture of global finance, China has chosen to forge a unique path defined by its development philosophy. The concept of "financial development with Chinese characteristics" is based on a comprehensive, systematic strategy under the leadership of President Xi Jinping, who has consistently stressed the core purpose of finance as serving the real economy and supporting the overall modernization of China. Rooted in China's unique historical trajectory, this approach leads state-led governance, innovation-driven reform, risk control, and inclusivity to foster a robust, secure, and high-quality financial system.

The term "financial development with Chinese characteristics" was first emphasized during a group study session of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party of China (CPC) Central Committee in February 2019 and has since become a critical pillar of Xi Jinping's economic thought. Through the 2023 Central Financial Work Conference, when building a financially strong nation was elevated to a strategic national goal. The roots of this philosophy can be traced back to Xi's 17 years in Fujian Province (1985-2002). During this period, he led pioneering efforts in financial reform, exploring innovative ways to use finance to support industrial growth, infrastructure development, and poverty alleviation. Such hands-on experience shaped his deep understanding of the dialectical relationship between finance and the economy.

One compelling example is the Fuyao Group, now a global leader in automotive glass. In the 1990s, Fuyao faced a liquidity crisis. Xi, recognizing the company's potential, immediately intervened, instructing local authorities to facilitate financial support. His timely action helped Fuyao secure a major loan, saving the company and enabling its rise. This philosophy is evident in China's strategic financial allocations towards infrastructure, technology, and manufacturing, ensuring that capital reaches sectors crucial for national development. From high-tech zones in Fuzhou to the expansion of inclusive finance in rural China, the financial sector under President Xi's leadership has been instrumental in sustaining industrial innovation, alleviating poverty, and addressing regional imbalances.

Rebuilding the Future Together: Azerbaijan and Turkmenistan Strengthen Regional Alliance

The visit to the Republic of Azerbaijan by Gurbanguly Berdimuhamedov, Chairman of the People Council of Turkmenistan, hosted by the President Ilham Aliyev was an official visit but one which actually symbolized much more than official diplomacy. This high level contact created a focus on shared vision of peaceful coexistence and shared development of the region as well as the preservation of their culture and thus is a part of the larger directions in Turkic cooperation and the transformation of the South Caucasus following the recent conflict.

The historical and cultural roots of the Azerbaijan-Turkmenistan relations are strong and lie in the common roots of Turkic people, language closeness, and century-old interdependence. Ever since having appeared as individual statehoods after the breakup of the Soviet Union, the two countries experienced a gradual development of ties with each other in various fields such as energy, logistics, education, and humanitarian projects, etc.

The recent trip of the Chairman Berdimuhamedov to Azerbaijan is an indicator that Gurbanguly wants not only a revalidation of these historic relationships but he wants to diversify and strengthen them in accordance with changing geopolitical realities. As a strategic linkage to worldwide trading and energy, the Caspian region promises the two nations of Azerbaijan and Turkmenistan to become key players to determine the economic destiny of Eurasia. This visit, thus, was a diplomatic activity rather than a statement of interest to engage more in defining connectivity and security in the region.

Likewise, the leaders paying a joint visit to the liberated lands in Garabagh with one of the focuses of their tour being on such historically rich cities as Fuzuli and Shusha served as one of the most indicative episodes of the visit. This part of the journey had its symbolic significance of enormous character. It made highlighted Azerbaijan post-conflict recovery initiative and placed the nation on the pedestal of revival and reconstruction after long occupation and war.
